This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

The aim of the author is to introduce the student of Biochemistry into its clinical practicum.

This manual is intended to be a reference book for the selection of the right remedy, potency, etc.

The arrangement of the book is so self-evident, that no explanations are necessary.

It must be mentioned, that the use of this manual cannot be likened to a dictionary, as the individual critic, in the concrete case, must give the decision; it is therefore necessary to use more time in going over this manual, than merely to expect an alphabetically arranged repertory.

THE AUTHOR.

INTRODUCTION.

Supposing the reader more or less familiar with the general outline of Biochemistry, the author, in the following paragraphs, will try to give a most concise exposition of the evolution and further development of the tissue salts in the clinical field, RESULTING FROM AN EXCLUSIVE PRACTICE WITH BIOCHEMICAL REMEDIES FOR THE PAST TEN YEARS.

The 25th and last original Edition of the late Schüssler's Therapy, gives a meagre and, for most perusers, a very unsatisfactory exposition of the inner working of his remedies.

We can almost call his Therapy a disposition or sketch to a larger missing work.

This wanting explanation of the late Dr. Schüssler, felt especially during the time of changing from the Homœopathic description of the "Twelve Tissue Salts," caused the author, from the start, to collect notes from his own experience, and all available literature, for self instructing reference.

The present volume has resulted from this, and by its publication is intended to fill out the gap existing between "Schüssler's Abridged Therapy," and the many questions arising in the daily use of Biochemistry.

THE REMEDY, POTENCY AND DOSE.

In the "Mittheilungen über Biochemie" (Biochemical reports), No. II., 1903, the reader will find an interesting article, dealing with the preparation of tissue salts without milk-sugar, as deteriorating to the clean action of the remedy. The milk-sugar containing on its own part tissue remedies. The writer (no physician) commends an expensive and somewhat unclear procedure of mutual chemical action, resulting in a præcipitat of the questionable tissue salt now soluble in water.

The writer claims also possible deterioration of the remedy from the trituration in the porcelain mortars, possibly thus adding particles of the porcelain to the remedy.

Although this essay at first appeared quite logical, after due consideration of all pro and contras, you cannot help being opposed to this hairsplitting opinion. The biochemical, as well as the homœopathic triturations, have to the present time worked to the entire satisfaction of the late Dr. Schüssler and all other physicians. But let us suppose the writer of the said article was right!

Now, how shall the adulteration of the perfect remedy be prevented, when the patient puts this chemically pure salt into his mouth?

The remedy works almost exclusively from the mouth (papillæ of the tongue). The remedy either as powder, tablet or solution, comes in contact with the saliva. The analysis of the saliva gives the following startling information:

Epithel and Mucin.	37.985
Ptyalin and Albumen	23.978
Rhodankalium.	0.707
Inorganic salts	38.037

Again the ash analysis of inorganic salts of this saliva informs us that our remedy will be mixed up with the following salts:

K Cl.	38.006
$K_2 SO_4$	13.908
$K_2 PO_4$	21.278
$Na_3 PO_4$.	16.917
$Ca_3 P_2O_4$	9.246
$Mg_3 P_2O_8$	0.338

It is evident that the remedy must work from another point than that of chemical purity, the postulate of the foregoing writer.

The "Tissue Salts" are curing and effective, but the question of the quo modo cannot be solved from the point of pure chemistry; the action of the remedy will be more readily understood from the action of the potency.

Some time ago the author discovered that the nearly universal opinion existed, that tissue remedies must be prescribed in 6x or 12x or in still lower potencies if judged as biochemical; but if prescribed in the 30th, 30x, 200th, etc., the prescription was considered homœopathic.

We know to-day that the inorganic constituents of the body correspond to the 6x–12x trituration; but does this fact indicate the necessity of giving the 6th or 12th trituration?

And, furthermore, how could 1x–6x be acceptable if so far below the actual percentage in the living tissues?

Schüssler himself advised the giving of small doses and having them repeated, in preference to large and frequent doses.

We must never forget, that the actual use and manner of selecting the remedy, and not the potency, will decide the question between Homœopathy and Biochemistry (Cellulartherapy), as the potency must be selected according to special need in the concrete case.

The real working of the high or low potency can best be elucidated from the side of a new but daily growing science "Radiant Energy," destined perhaps to overthrow all that which has been accepted as immovable canons for decades.

Not only the working, but also the material existence of crude but high potencies, will be explained in the following quotation:

"The Atom is composed of a multitude of infinitely small atoms called electrons, which revolve around each other like the planets. But the electrons, while they constitute the atoms of which all material substances are made, are not themselves conceived as being matter. Experiments prove that they are purely electric in their nature." (Edg. Larkin.)

And if we remember the facts found recently by the physiological chemists, Gautier, Bourcet, Gley and others, in regard to Arsenic, Iodine, etc., in the human body, what former analytical chemists, in their searching investigations not even suspected, we may adopt the following thesis:

I. That all criticism against high or low potencies must be refuted, as the ability to chemically find or not find Arsenic, Iodine, etc., in the 30th or 200th potency is not conclusive for the presence or non-presence of the remedy. Mathematically a substance will be divisible ad infinitum; therefore the question will not be out of place, why shall a substance not be contained materially everywhere in progressive potency and thus not discernible?

II. This also refutes the opinion of the crude drug action expressed in the essay, criticised in a former paragraph. The real action of the remedy must be regarded as a wave, caused by the surrounding action of the trituration in the special electric irritation of enervation, etc., finally causing its entrance and thus replenishing the cell salt mancos out of the surrounding medium of the impoverished cell. We have thus a replenishing of the cell deficit.

And, besides the now so far considered subdivision of the atom, we must remember the law of the molecule, teaching that the difference between a molecule of an elementary substance and that of a chemical combination (salt, etc.), is, that an element-molecule is composed of at least two equal atoms, whereas the molecule of a combination consists of at least in the union of two unequal atoms.

We have to-day a subdivision of the atom, the Electron; do we know if not in time this Electron will again be found to be constituted of other parts and other forces?

The more recent result of the experiments and observations of the Roentgen, Bacquerel, and now also the Radium rays, is, that everything originates from one source (urstoff), and that everything, flower, stone, metal, air, living organisms, etc., are nothing else than different aggregations.

The spectral analysis was the fore-runner of the last mentioned discoveries, which possibly will demonstrate the faults and fundamental errors of all our proud natural sciences.

Molecule, Atom, Electron.—The proportion perhaps between the atom (unseen till to-day) and the Electron can be compared to that of a ball with a diameter of 800 feet to a ball with a diameter of one-eighth inch. (Croke.)

If, therefore, we return to our starting point, we will see that in a certain way our understanding of the so-called chemismus of the cell and of the action of the potency (p^{oo}) has been, after all this time of speculation, brought to a nearly satisfactory point of understanding. We can now claim that the mathematical proof has been added for removing one of the greatest stumbling stones in the minds of thinking physicians.

It will be seen that the potentized remedy can be potentized according to mathematical consideration, ad infinitum; the objection not to find the potentized drug is equally untenable, as would be against color, not visible to the eye on account of either too many or too few ethereal vibrations.

Also the remedy cannot act like a direct cramming of particles into the diseased cells, but as a certain stimulus on the nervous system, enabling the diseased cell to be provided out of deposits in the intercellular fluid.

To illustrate what material quantities, or their subdivisions, are necessary in the replenishing of an impoverished cell, the author will add the quantitative distribution of some salts in the

This rule will always remain: Use a priori 6x–12x and then go lower or higher, according to presenting features.

A case well progressing for weeks under the same remedy will generally be cured by the same remedy; but always in a higher and higher potency, representing the smaller growing portions needed by the cell-salt manco, corresponding to the lesser growing nerve stimulant of the needed molecule in the cell, expressed in the higher potency, representing the necessary modification of the accentuation on the stimulus, thus directing the introduction of proportional smaller fractions into the cell body.

It is at present the author's custom to prepare a saturated watery solution of the remedy, and in acute cases, order the patient to take ten drops every half hour; in chronic cases, ten drops three times per day. If it should be necessary to give two different remedies, they are given alternately every three hours.

The higher potencies are given less frequently; it may happen that perhaps the dose (generally a single one) will be repeated but once after twenty-four hours, or after eight days, or later on after one or two months.

Again, in some cases 30x will be repeated as often as 6x or 12x.

The dose as also the potency is, especially in complicated cases, further dependent on rules put down by v. Grauvogl.

The late Dr. Schüssler in his Therapy calls attention, page 75, to hydræmia; this corresponds to v. Grauvogl's hydrogenoid constitution.

As this paradigma is referred to in relation to Natrum sulfuricum in different Materia Medica books, the author thought it necessary to become acquainted with the entire teachings of v. Grauvogl.

His rules, at first difficult, gave the author a specially valuable understanding for the selection of the potency and doses.

v. Grauvogl begins with the division of the curable diseases into three groups; according to the greatest characteristics to be found in the human organism. These groups were called by him, Constitutional Groups.

These three groups will best be understood if the reader will follow the generalization,

I. Too great a water percentage.

II. Too great an oxydation of the blood.

III. Too slow an oxydation of the blood.

v. Grauvogl puts up the following paradigmata:

I. HYDROGENOID CONSTITUTION:

(a) Aggravated (<) by dampness or anything increasing the percentage of water in the blood or tissues.

(b) The characteristic periodicity.

(c) The aggravation effected by medical electricity (amelioration oxygenoid constitution).

II. Oxygenoid Constitution:

(a) Gracile body.

(b) Aggravation by change of weather, but the aggravation only during the change.

(c) Amelioration during snowfall and rain.

III. Carbonitrogen Constitution.

(a) The urine is wanting in chlorides and phosphates.

(b) Irregularity of the lungs and heart.

(c) Epilepsy, tabes.

Corresponding to this paradigma are the following rules for potency and doses:

Hydrogenoid Constitution will best be treated by the low potencies up to 12x, but foremost 3x–6x.

Oxygenoid Constitution will mostly be the field for 20x–30x, seldom going as low as 12x.

Carbonitrogen Constitution can be treated only by high potencies, this means 30th centesimal and higher potencies.

The special rules are the following: The low potencies dissolved in a glass of water (about fifteen drops), one teaspoonful every two, three or four hours.

The medium potencies dissolved in the foregoing way, one teaspoonful every three to six hours.

The high potencies will best be taken in single doses of one to three grains. Each dose repeated for three successive days, with following Placebo, to observe any reaction in the present status.

Schüssler, mostly addressing the lay public, refrained from all more technical and difficult prescription in dose and potency, although he himself made use of various potencies, as seen by the reports of his cures and pamphlets.

THE SELECTION OF THE REMEDY.

After having studied Schüssler's original Biochemic Therapy, the student will observe that Schüssler does not make direct statements, but leaves most to the reader's care.

The practical way to successfully treat diseases from the physician's standpoint will be different from that of an interested layman. In the latter's case more patience, and waiting for results will be granted than to the physician; at times unreasonable people expect almost to feel better when either the medicine or even only a prescription is given.

The Materia Medica division of this book will enable the physician to ask such questions which plainly will bring out the full details of a case, so that before having consulted Part III the beginner will have made some choice of a remedy.

Should now the student find in Part III different remedies, and between them his preselected one, the affirmation of this selection will be gained by carefully going over the second division of Part I. Here the reader will find the two divisions WILL CURE and further AND WILL THEREFORE BE USED IN.

The student, after each successful cure, must try and impress upon his mind certain facial expressions, so that in time with the aid of Facial Diagnosis, he will acquire certain points for recognizing certain expressions as coming under a special salt.

The same can be said in regard to the selection of the new remedies, but with this precaution: The new remedies must not be used before all means have been exhausted to cure with the aid of the older remedies or with the aid of changed potencies; also where a priori we know that these new combinations must be applied, viz., Phos. cannot replace Arsenic, Iod., etc.

The coating of the tongue cannot always be absolutely relied upon, but in a great majority of chronic cases a certain confidence can be placed in it, if accompanied by other indications.

The selection of a remedy will only be difficult in old or neglected cases, with many foregoing different treatments. Here, first of all, a remedy, respectively a regime, must be introduced to make the patient amenable to treatment. For this Kali phos. will generally prove the cardinal remedy.

SCHUESSLER AND HIS CRITICS.

During the process of compiling and sifting the material of the present work the author studied all critics of past and recent times. In all these criticisms the principle and fundamental idea of the critic was not observed. Moreover, the deductions attained were that when the critic found he was coming to the contrary end of his undertaking, i. e., he was really endorsing Schüssler, he cut short his argument and pleaded the sentimental part pro Homœopathy as the older and better part, etc., etc., even if the good and great traits could not be denied.

In this vein, we can observe—more or less all critics have written from Constantin Hering down to the present time.

The author has found no critical remark touching the theme from the side he will present in the following lines: Schüssler based his Theory of the Tissue Salts on the teachings of Moleschott, Virchow, and last, not least, Bunge. It can hardly be comprehended by any physiologically schooled physician, that in all this time not one word has been written or said against such a selection as Schüssler's tissue salts. It must not be forgotten that at his time Arsenic, Iod., Bromium, Plumbum, Mangan., etc., were not as yet recognized as constituents of the human organism.

It is incomprehensible that no voice was raised by any of the leading critics to ask Schüssler, and now his followers, how just those twelve salts and no others were selected, where it is known as a common fact that, regarding the ash analysis and the proof for salt formation, no absolute certainty has existed or will be reached for some time.

We know the constituents of the human structure so well that the opinion can be pronounced that not many more elements are wanting, but we do not know with absolute certainty the formation intra vitam of these salts.

The analysis teaches the different parts, elements and acids. The salts found in the analysis are more or less products of the process of analyzing; the found acids often prove to be nothing else than products of the analysis also.

This and only this would constitute a formidable argumentation against Schüssler and his teachings.

Having recognized this fact, the author tried to sustain Schüssler, and found a comparatively easy solution, as also a logical coercing necessity for the additional remedies.

1. The cure of diseases (so far as curable per se) will be effected by replenishing the deficient cell salt or salts.

2. The deficient salts must be selected from a larger number of tissue salts than Schüssler's, as all those combinations must be taken into consideration which may possibly be formed by the elements found in the ash analysis, for instance: Calc. phos. and Calc. hypophos., etc., and again, combinations between Iod., Ars., Phos., Calc., Natr., Mangan, etc.

By widening the limits of Schüssler's original twelve remedies in such an indicated way we eliminate the fundamental error of restraining the inorganic salts of the tissues to those salt formations, and, furthermore, we have gained by this proceeding a larger armamentarium, which will more readily work a cure.

It must be emphasized that Schüssler selected the twelve most prominent remedies (cell salts), and, therefore, it is understood that, to a certain degree, Schüssler and his followers effected such brilliant cures.

It is thus evident that with an enlarged sphere of working remedies the natural limitation of effectiveness of the remedies in so-called incurable cases will be put off further and further with the increased knowledge of the special Materia Medica.

THE ADDITIONAL REMEDIES.

What has been done in regard to those additional remedies?

They have been added sparingly into the Semiotik or Symptomatology of the Tissue Remedies of Schüssler, where there was a gap, according to pathological and chemical considerations.

The clinical notes in the Homœopathic Materia Medica gave the material for the experiments, etc.

The author must here refer to his observations, published in the Homœopathic Recorder, March 15, 1903, regarding Sepia and Natr. mur., and, again, the finding of the homœopathic Simile with the help of T. F. Allen's Boenninghausen's Therapeutic Pocket-Book to exchange with the oftimes seemingly strange tissue salt ally.

The description of each of the new remedies is given very carefully, without mere suggestions, but bona fide facts to be enlarged upon as opportunity arises.

If now it would be remarked that if the clinical notes in the homœopathic literature were the support of Cellular-Therapy, the present work would not be necessary, the answer would be:

(1.) The homœopathic selections consider too many remedies, thus hiding the clear-cut features of the indications, and forming of the clinical notes—a lost book.

(2.) The pathological phenomena have certain undeniable symptoms, which are few compared with the unlimited ones of the homœopathic drug. And that even those pathological symptoms, variable to a certain degree by the individuality of the patient, are not so numerous and bewildering as those dealt with from the homœopathic standpoint.

Those pathological symptoms (congruent to the term Semiotik instead of Symptomatology) are the indications for the remedies.

For this reason we well understand that the homœopathic physician will use, for example, in worm diseases, Calc. fluor., Ferrum phos., Kali mur., and many other remedies, against Natrum phos. and Natrum mur. according to biochemical teaching.

PART I.

MATERIA MEDICA.

FIRST DIVISION.

BIOCHEMISTRY.

THE ORIGINAL TWELVE TISSUE REMEDIES.

MATERIA MEDICA.

I.

SELECTION OF THE REMEDIES.

1. KALI SULFURICUM.

Aggravation: External dry heat; in a warm room; during the evening; warm, fatty food; coffee; sour fruit; tobacco.

Amelioration: Cool, open air; denuding or lying on the painful side or parts.

General Symptoms: Feeling of heaviness, weariness, chilliness; palpitation, fear, melancholy; the localized pains show an intermittent roaming character.

Kali sulf. will cure: (1.) By effecting the access of oxygen and so hastening the formation of new cells of the epidermis and epithelium, loosening and throwing off the old ones.

(2.) The deficiency as expressed in the yellow slimy deposit on the tongue; yellow sticky secretion, but mostly of a thin character nearly resembling the Nat. mur. secretion, but always with a certain yellowish green tint. Kali sulf., sticky, moist scales; Nat. mur., dry.

If Magn. Phos. in pains or cramps fails, often Kali sulf. must be used instead. Kali sulf. will be found always closely related to Nat. mur. and Kali mur.

2. NATRUM SULFURICUM.

Aggravation: External cold; external cold application; cold moisture; coughing; sneezing; bending; repose; time of menstruation; change of weather.

Amelioration: Change of position; walking around; after defæcation and urination.

General Symptoms: A general green or greenish yellow coating on the tongue, with bitter taste. The secretion under Nat. sulf. indication is greenish yellow. Nat. sulf. will cure by eliminating the water that was formed during the retrogressive metamorphosis of the cells from the body. The bitter taste belonging to Nat. sulf. must never be confounded with the bitter taste of Kali mur. or Nat. phos.

Kali mur., taste sour and bitter.

Nat. phos., taste sour and bitter, but rancid, sharp and pungent, as the taste of an acid.

3. CALCAREA FLUORICA.

Aggravation: Heating drinks.

Amelioration: Application of cold moisture.

Between Calcar. fluor. and Ferrum phos. will be found a certain relation as in lesions of the bones, elastic fibres, etc. We observe, therefore, the same characteristic amelioration by cold, cold moisture, etc.

4. SILICEA.

Aggravation: In cold air; cold, wet application; lying on the painful side; motion.

Amelioration: Warm room; radiating heat, hot application (agreeable if very hot, almost scalding.)

General Symptoms: Arising from suppressed foot sweat; sensitive to noise; general aggravation (Calc. phos.) at night.

Silicea will cure: Pus by absorption, also blood. Helps out Calc. phos., chronic arthritis; renal gravel; old cases of paralysis; catarrhs.

Silicea is closely allied to Calc. phos., Calc. sulf., Kali mur., Magn. phos., and Nat. phos.

5. CALCAREA SULFURICA.

Will be used only supplementary to Nat. phos., Nat. sulf., Silicea, Kali sulf.

Calc. sulf. will cure: Diseases of the connective tissue.

All more or less chronic diseases as rheumatism, eruptions, catarrhs, (with yellowish-white lumpy secretion).

6. NATRUM MURIATICUM.

Aggravation: Summer heat; bending forward; overstudy; soft touch.

Amelioration: Firmly leaning against anything; loosening the clothing; drinking cold water; lying down.

General Symptoms: Morose, tearful disposition; dislikes consolation; periodical diseases; tongue clean; clear, watery, frothy saliva.

7. KALI MURIATICUM.

Aggravation: Inhaling raw air; quickly cooling off; strong glaring light; cold wet applications; fatty rich food.

Amelioration: Dry heat; dry hot applications; keeping quiet.

Kali mur. works clinically together with Ferr. phos., Calc. sulf. and Kali sulf.—Nat. mur.; Silicea.

The difference between Kali mur. and Magn. phos. will be found in the fact that Magn. phos. will only be relieved by hot, and Kali mur. by cold and hot applications. And furthermore, the Magn. phos. patient will be relieved by hard pressure, while the Kali mur. patient will be aggravated by it.

Kali mur. will cure: Plastic exudations (gray white coating, catarrhs); second stage of inflammation; skin diseases (here related to Kali sulf. and Natrum mur.).

8. CALCAREA PHOSPHORICA.

Aggravation: Every change of weather; taking a bath; dangling the limbs; after defæcation.

Amelioration: Crouching; motion of lower extremities; lying down.

General Symptoms: Cold, numb, clammy sensation; worse at night; parts fall asleep easily; pains along bones; and sutures of bones; skin becomes red and itches after a bath; getting hungry soon after eating.

Calc. phos. may often be alternated with Ferr. phos.; skin burns by cold washing, Silicea; skin feels better from cold washing, Calc fluor.

It is interesting to notice the great affinity between Calc. phos. and Nat. mur.

9. MAGNESIA PHOSPHORICA.

Aggravation: Soft touch; slow motion; moist warmth; restriction to move.

Amelioration: Hard pressure with the hand; dry warmth; quick motion; bent position.

General Symptoms: Darting, spasmodic, burning, lightning-like pains with constrictive feeling. In all dubious cases Calc. phos. and Kali sulf. must be compared.

The claimed preference for the right side of the body, could not be observed as a characteristic trait.

10. FERRUM PHOSPHORICUM.

Aggravation: Motion; excitement; warmth.

Amelioration: Cold; slow motion.

After Ferrum phos. often Kali sulf. will follow better than Kali mur. In many cases we will find a close relation between Ferrum phos. and Nat. phos. (so in headaches).

11. NATRUM PHOSPHORICUM.

Aggravation: In the afternoon; thunder-storm; eating fatty food, milk, sweets; coming from the cold into a warm room.

General Symptoms: Moist, creamy, golden yellow coating of the tongue; creamy, yellow, thick catarrh; secretions with an acid smell; arthritic pains.

Nat. phos. restores the catalyptic functions of the cell.

Nat. phos. must be compared with Calc. phos. in diarrhœa infantum; as both remedies are nearly equal, only Calc. phos. does not exhibit the same acid character as Nat. phos.

Calc. phos. is often jointly indicated with Nat. phos. for clinical purposes.

2. KALI PHOSPHORICUM.

Aggravation: Depression; excitement; overstudy; beginning motion; coming from the warm into the cold.

Amelioration: Motion of the upper extremities; fanning; cold applications.

General Symptoms: Paralyzing after-effects of any pain or mental commotion; beneficial of a little excitement or company, and aggravation if alone; fears to be left alone; night terror; agoraphobia.

II.

It is lamentable that, to the present date, most writers of Materia Medica have confounded Kali muriat. with Kali chloricum. Thus it is found that writers as Dr. Thos. L. Bradford in his Index to Homœopathic Provings, page 169, writes Kali chloricum—Potassium chlorate, Potassæ chloras, Kali hyper oxygenatum, Chlorate of Potash, Kali muriaticum. Allen, Cyclopædia, vol. 5, vol. 10, and further, on page 170, Kali muriaticum, see Kali chloricum.

In justice to the memory of the great T. F. Allen, it must be stated that the Cyclopædia especially refers only to Kali chloricum as Potassium chlorate, $KClO_3$.

In the supplement, Vol. X, page 561, T. F. Allen also refers only to toxic doses of Kali chloricum and merely on the clinical use of Kali mur. by Dr. Schüssler, page 611, in this handbook.

According to Dr. John H. Clarke's Dictionary of Practical Materia Medica, Vol. II., Part I., Kali mur. was first introduced by the late Schüssler, and later on C. Hering (vide Vol. II., page 117) amalgamated the symptoms of the two under the heading Kali mur.

III.

FACIAL DIAGNOSIS.

The author presumes this to be the first attempt toward building up a facial diagnosis with specific directions. He has described here all that was deemed helpful toward recognizing the indicated remedy, not only in the face of the patient, but in his whole appearance.

THE PHOSPHATES.—We can notice as a common and general feature of the Phosphate patient, an irritable nervousness, debilitated vitality, anxiety and depression, with excitability according to circumstances.

A delicate skin, soft grained hair, livid yellowish or earth-like complexion, showing in excitement a sharp demarcation of the red hue against the pale, livid parts.

Rapid emaciation; bloated face; blue rings around sunken, hollow eyes.

CALCAREA PHOSPHORICA—Face looks old with emaciation. Skin of the face loose. Coldness of nose, ears and every prominent feature. Freckles and pimples (mostly in girls and women). Sore corners of mouth. Upper lip enlarged.

The peripheric limbs, etc., do not harmonize with the big centrally located masses of the body.

Head is large and supported by a thin, weak neck. The abdomen is the so-called potato belly resting on thin, ill-proportioned legs. Joints are clumsy.

The least exertion causes a cold perspiration on the face.

Uneasiness drives the patient from place to place, but bodily weakness counterbalances it. Patient seems to be quiet.

The veins are prominent and appear to be turgescent.

FERRUM PHOSPHORICUM. — Livid and anæmic face; eyes always bloodshot; mucosæ white; the arteries are visible and moving.

Hurried and labored breathing; vibration of alæ narium.

Erythism, with depression of the sensory nerves.

Acne or some other pimples on forehead or chin.

Sluggishness of appearance, with a certain amount of cowardice respecting the day's inconveniences.

KALIUM PHOSPHORICUM. — Kali phos. patient has either half closed eyes, or glassy, bright, staring eyes; a stupid, dazed, or intoxicated look. Face appears emaciated; eyes hollow; skin livid or dirty.

MAGNESIA PHOSPHORICA.—Ailing, white, ghost-like, misanthropic face, with anxious look; quick mimic play around mouth and nose.

The skin of the face appears to be drawn. The patient appears thin, emaciated, lean and of light complexion; full of ambition, but tires easily; quick in motion, but slow in thinking; talks with the whole body, and always gesticulates to correct the slow flow of thought. Weakened will power; no resistance against pains; easily governed by others.

NATRUM PHOSPHORICUM.—Patient appears to be very gracile in the entire bone frame. The skeleton seems to have been formed at the expense of the muscles.

Patient is as in a stupor. Timidity, fear, fright, anxiety or apprehension are depicted in his features.

Nose and ears always itching and patient is continually rubbing same.

THE SULFATES.—The organism of the Sulfate patient is of a coarser grain than the Phosphate or Sodium patient.

The exhalation of the body is disagreeable.

Face is pale, only the prominent parts are red (lips, ears).

Neck is seemingly too weak to carry the head, and, therefore, the head is carried bent forward.

Patient sleeps with head on low pillow.

CALCAREA SULFURICA.—In general, a pimply and pustular face with suffering expression.

Soreness of eyelids, blisters on under lip.

Skin of body and face in more or less chronic state of dry eczema.

KALIUM SULFURICUM.—Patient seems to be entirely devoid of ambition or resistance, and such is the expression of his face—henpecked.

Face swollen, worse on left side near eye.

Yellowish color, more or less, over whole face and body.

Lips shrivelled, tongue (protruding) red.

Neck seems to be hampered in free mobility.

NATRUM SULFURICUM.—Bilious, choleric nature; right side of face swollen in the morning.

Pale, yellow, gloomy face, looking as if patient had not slept all night.

Eyes dim and blurred.

Desquamation and slavering of lips.

THE CHLORIDES.—The patient of this class differs from the phosphate group, in being less nervous; and from the sulfate group by being less pungent in corporeal exhalation and less coarse in fibre.

The face looks sickly, œdematous, pimply, with irregular features.

The general character can be called: dull, torpid, passive.

The body is well proportioned.

KALIUM MURIATICUM.—Swelling of glands is of medium hardness.

Inflammatory and very red, soft with small vesicles.

The ulcerations go deeper than those of Nat. mur., but not so deep as Calc. phos.

The Kali mur. patient is well fed, has light blond hair.

Anxious face expression.

Patient gets worse from motion, but must occupy himself, so he plays with his fingers.

Exudation as in all chlorides, ropy, but thicker than under Nat. mur.

Cheeks swollen; sluggish nature. (Sus scrofa.)

NATRUM MURIATICUM.—Livid œdematous face (left side) with shining oily skin, often yellowish; granulated eruption; flat red ulcers with white spots.

Skin of face sensitive; eyes appear wet from tears.

Pimply excoriations on the hairy regions of the scalp.

Hydræa around lips and mouth.

Exudations clear, watery, sharply excruciating, biting.

Retreating, disposition; thin emaciated body; pensive; melancholic; taciturn; often combined.

CALCAREA FLUORICA.—Face of an alabaster whiteness, with the veins showing through the

I.

THE ADDITIONAL REMEDIES IN THEIR ELEMENTARY BASIS.

THE MORE IMPORTANT ELEMENTS.

Arsenic has been lately found throughout the entire organism. The chemical analyses of recent years have proved that Arsenic will be found in the blood, skin and glands—mostly in the thyroid gland.

Iodum, like Arsenic, was also found throughout the body, especially in the blood and glands.

Drs. E. Glay and P. Bourcet have observed that after copious bleeding, the remaining blood in the body does not contain any Iodine; that all the remaining Iodine was collected in the thyroid gland.

The first observation regarding Iodine in the human organism was made in recent analyses of menstrual blood. It is, therefore, necessary to include the two elements, Arsenic and Iodum, in the list of tissue builders.

The next step is now to use combinations of Arsenic and Iodine with Calcium, Kalium, and Natrum under the leading points of the original salts of the late Schüssler.

The indications so far are identical with

Schüssler, only that Ars. and Iod. instead of Phos., etc., will give results in very old cases—as here the real deficit is Ars. and not Phos., etc.

Both Ars. and Iod. under certain but so far unknown condition supply cell deficits and thus cure so-called incurable diseases.

This last term, "incurable diseases," is the introduction for the Iod. combinations with Calcium, Kalium and Natrum.

Under the Iod. combinations, the most prominent so far, have been used in conditions conforming to Calcium and Kalium, but with special indications for Iod.

It should be here added that the results in the combination of Ars. and Iod. on one side and Calc., Kali and Nat. on the other side, have caused the author to make use of the combination Arsenic, Iodatum and later Phosphorus iodatus, especially in cases where the whole organism seemed to be disorganized.

Manganum was rejected by the late Schüssler, but cannot be so any longer, as improved chemical analyses have proved the constant presence of Mangan. in the blood and in the different organs, as the liver, etc.

THE LESSER ADDITIONAL TISSUE BUILDERS.

It must be remarked that the following elements are differently employed than those of the first division, as they are not so often needed because of their less important position in the organism. At times it seemed advisable to exclude them altogether, but then again a case seemed absolutely unmanageable without these remedies.

Alumina is found throughout the whole organism in minimum quantities, but mostly in the spinal marrow, nerves and skin, and also in the mucosæ.

The sphere of action corresponds to that of the Natrum and Kalium salts. We find, therefore, the following clinical indications:

1. Dryness from lack of natural secretions (mucosæ).
2. Nervous prostratien from physical exhaustion, mostly from drain on albumen, physiological and pathological excretions.
3. Constrictive feeling.
4. Craving for indigestibles.
5. Creeping and numb feeling in limbs with impaired and uncertain locomotion; also in skin diseases.
6. Diseases otherwise curable by Calc. phos., Kali sulf., Nat. mur., Kali phos., Kali mur. and Nat. phos.

Bromium will be used in connection with Kali phos. and Nat. phos., with special reference to mental irritation. Skin symptoms resulting from neurotic disturbances in combination with Kal- ium, Calcium and Arsenic must be regarded as absolutely necessary to effect a cure—in old ulcers.

The clinical use will be: All Bromium salts and combinations are true stimulants, therefore useful in all atrophic conditions.

(a.) Arsenic bromat.—Skin and mucosæ, as also the nervous system.

(b.) Brom.—Spinal cord (twitching, convulsion), skin (foul ulcers with pain, but different from Arsenic).

(c.) Calcarea bromat.—Similar to indications for Calc. phos.

Barium.—The indications are nearly identical with those of the Calcium salts.

The Barium salts (Bar. phos., mur., and iod.) occupy a middle ground between Calc. fluor. aud Calc. phos., and so the clinical use can easily be deducted.

1. Glandular system.
2. Bones.
3. Nerves.
4. Fat formation (Lipom).
5. Scrofulosis.
6. Old age.

Cuprum has been found combined with Plumbum, Zincum and Arsenic in the blood, more or less through the whole organism; also in certain quantities, with Plumbum and Mangan, in the intestines, especially the liver.

Lithium will seldom be used; but sometimes only Lithium will effect a cure after Calc. fluor., Sil., Kali mur. and Nat. phos.

Zincum and Plumbum have been used in conjunction with Kali phos. in diseases of the brain and spine. Zincum especially represents the hysterical side. Plumbum represents the functional deficit in the nerve cell.

II.

THE DIFFERENT GROUPS OF THE NEW ELEMENTS.

I. ARSENIC AND ARSENIC PREPARATIONS. (Combinations.)

(a.) Arsenic Album.

Curative in kidney, blood, nerve (including spinal-marrow and brain substance), skin diseases.

The fact that Ars. is regularly found in the blood, explains the great and universal range and use of Arsenic and its combinations.

1. In all cases of profound prostrations (collapse, exhaustion).

2. Paralysis especially of lower extremities, resulting from spinal myelitis.

3. Weakness of the heart functions, thus resulting in stasis, œdemata.

4. Anæmia, hysterics, etc , causing a hypersensitiveness of material or imaginary pains.

5. Septic or non-septic disorganization of the blood.

6. Periodicity.

7. All pains and symptoms relieved by heat.

8. Face expression and appearance: Clay-colored, waxy, blue margins, anxious, distorted features; yellow spots on the chest, etc.; dark rings around the eyes.

9. The special domains for Arsenic (Plumb. cuprum, Mag., etc.) are the abdominal (pelvic) organs.

10. A special feature is, that patients needing Arsenic or Arsenic combinations want everything for their cure or relief done immediately; they hardly can wait until a remedy or solution is prepared.

(b.) Calcarea Arsenicosa.

Corresponds in general to Calc. phos. and Arsenic alb. combined. This preparation has been found especially useful under the following conditions:

1. Summer complaint (cholera nostras) in extremis (vide Semiotik in neglected cases).

2. Anæmia not progressing under Calc. phos., although seemingly indicated; hereditary phthisis or general scrofulosis, but without any local findings—Epilepsy.

3. Ailment and general decline without any basis; impaired digestion, hysteria.

4. Skin diseases, strictly belonging to Calc. phos., but not yielding, are speedily cured by Calc. ars.

(c.) Cuprum Arsenicosum.

Corresponds to Cuprum and Arsenic, but more closely related to Ars.

It has been used: Where Ars., in diseases of the abdominal viscera and nerves, seemed powerless to prevent collapse, paralysis of the heart in exhaustion and prostration. The character of such, to the exitus going, prostration is: Cold and sticky, nearly slimy (death sweat) perspiration of the entire body, with or without the terrible pains and anxiety of Ars.

Conforms to the symptoms of Arsenic alb.

Kali ars. can be compared to Kali mur. in the combination with Ars.

The clinical experience shows that, with few exceptions, Kali ars. will eventually supplant all Ars. combinations.

Has been used extensively for Ars. and Nat. mur.

It has been found especially useful in cases of biting and excruciating discharge, conforming to symptoms of Nat. mur., and Nat. sulf., but not influenced or cured by either.

It must be mentioned, that several cases of trachoma have been promptly cured, after other indicated remedies failed.

II. IODUM AND IODUM COMBINATIONS.

Indicated symptoms are:

1. Great appetite and rapid emaciation, marked especially in glandular tissues; restless; weak.

2. Generally of despondent mood, but in wasting diseases, forced self-hypnotism of well feeling.

3. Highly excruciating discharge.

4. Deep organic diseases, tuberculosis; syphilis; leucæmia.

5. Iodum is found mostly in the glands and leucocytes.

6. Sensation of terrible weakness, but if put to the test, surprisingly strong.

7. Old age; dark hair and complexion; tearing at night in muscles and joints (syphilis); chronic hoarseness.

8. Subsultus tendinum; nervousness; restlessness.

Clinically used in: Atrophy; headache; leucæmia; prostatitis; uterine diseases.

1. Inflamed glands; polypi; fibromatosis; tumors.

2. Chronic cough day and night (green purulent expectoration and night sweats.)

3. Anæmia, with copious menses.

4. Calc. iodata will often be used, where Calc. phos. or Nat. mur. are ineffective.

5. Indurated glands (tonsils, uterus, etc.); movable nodules under the skin. (3x–6x.)

(b.) Kali Iodatum.

1. Is the chief Iodine combination.

2. It will be used in place of Iod., as Kali ars. is used for Ars.

3. Atrophic state of ovaries; climacterium presenile.

4. Dysentery (Jelly mucous).

5. Dry cough in larynx.

6. Atrophy in mammæ and testes.

7. All symptoms aggravated at night.

8. Tumors. (30th, single doses, but sparingly.)

9. Glands, bones (ulcerated, necrosis).

10. Itching herpes; papulæ on face; back, etc., pustules; boils leaving scars.

(c.) Natrum Iodatum.

1. Will be used in all cases where Iodum respectively Kali iod. and Nat. mur. can be recognized.

2. Nat. iod. has been used with good results in anæmia of the leucæmic form, not reacting on Kali phos. or Nat. sulf.

(d.) Plumbum Iodatum.

1. Pain in paralysis (vide general review).

2. Arterio-sclerosis, etc. (Compare Calc. iod. and Baryt. iod.)

3. Enlargement of glands.

(e.) Zincum Iodatum.

Compare Iodum and Zincum.

(f.) Baryta Iodata.

1. Compare Iod. and Barium.

2. In glands, tumors, scrofulosis, paralysis, brain, arteries.

III. CUPRUM, PLUMBUM AND ZINCUM.

Are found more or less together in their elementary functions in the nerve substance; also in the blood and abdominal organs, especially in the liver and intestinal tract. Individually the three elements must be considered as follows:

(a.) Cuprum.

1. Colic pains relieved by cold drinks.
2. Bluish skin; anæmia.
3. Clonus; abduction of limbs.
4. Cramps, with screams.
5. Cuprum is differentiated from Zinc. by unconsciousness.
6. Dysmenorrhœa with convulsions; obstructio intestinalis (intersusception) with singultus, spasmodic abdominal motion (in the muscles).
7. Heavy comatose sleep.
8. Restlessness.
9. Algid state (compare Calc phos. in cholera nostras).

10. Cuprum will always be a good starting remedy in hysteria and anæmic conditions.

11. Torpid anæmia, dysmenorrhœa, amenorrhœa and chlorosis.

12 Cramps in calves; pain along the spine.

13. < touch, like in Mag. phos. and Ars.

14. Spasms of œsophagus (Zinc.).

15. Chorea; thumb clenched.

16. Melancholia; solitude (Nat. mur.)

(b.) Plumbum.

1. Amenorrhœa, menorrhagia, with colic; vaginismus.

2. Climacterium; fullness of pelvic organs

3. Emaciation; sallow, corpse-like complexion.

4. External heat, internal chilliness—in the evening.

5. Sciatica; cramps.

6. Degeneration of spinal cord, the anterior columns; poliomyelitis.

7. Retractive sensation (of the abdomen or anus).

8. Lancinating pains from the back into the thighs; paraplegia.

9. Pain better from hard pressure. (Mag. phos.)

10. Paralysis with trembling.

11. Constipation, diarrhœa; cramps.

12. Chlorosis; following Fer. phos.

13. Undeveloped female intra-abdominal generative organs.

14. Severe neuralgia (lightning-like, Plum. iod.); after Mag. phos. without result.

DISCRIMINATION.—Cuprum: Colic; spasmodic pains, beginning at one point and spreading; distention of abdomen; cramps and pains < on touch; cramps, etc., more enteralgic.

Plumbum: Most severe colic; hardness, retraction of abdominal muscles; radiating pains to all parts of body; most obstinate constipation of hard, knotty fæces.

(c.) Zincum.

1. There is but one great indication for this remedy; fidgetiness, worse from restraint; all other possible indications arrange themselves around this singular feature.
2. Hysterical paralysis of the genital sphere globulus.
3. Cutting neuralgia, going to perfect numbness.
4. Convulsions.
5. Tabes dorsalis.
6. Paralysis of rectum and bladder.
7. Nymphomania; onanismus.
8. Twitching of muscles.
9. Delirium; Kali phos.

10. Spinal irritation, trembling, sciatica after Kali phos.

11. Pruritus; after Mag. phos.

12. Formication of skin after Calc. phos.

13. Aggravation from wine.

14. Emaciation, brain fag, impaired mental faculty.

15. Headache, always over eyes.

16. Eyes burn.

17. Neurasthenia. Compare Zinc. oxyd. and Zinc. phos., mostly after Fer. phos. (Phos. 30th) and Sil.

IV. BROMIUM AND ITS COMPOUNDS.

Brom. and Kali bromat. occupy the same position to each other as Iod. and Kali iod. or Ars. and Kali ars.

1. The sphere of action of Brom. and Kali brom. is in the nerves (brain), skin, genitals and mucosæ.

2. The preference for Kali bromat. is visible in all diseases depending on mental functions.

3. In wasting processes, etc., Brom. preparations must always be compared with Iod. preparations.

We must therefore keep in mind certain differentiations. Brom. and Brom. preparations show a special effect on degenerative processes of central nerve cells. This is proved by the fact that stimulants act favorably on Brom. patients, but not on Iod. patients. Furthermore, the patients for Brom. preparations show a certain fulness or fleshiness of the body (adiposa panicul) against the lean and lanky appearance of Iod. patients.

Arsenic bromat., Calcarea bromat., Kalium bromat., Natrum bromat. will be used according to the composition of the preparation.

Lithium bromat. is used in cases where Kali bromat. proves ineffectual.

Zincum bromat. is the only remedy which acts in cases where, by presenting a dualismus of the mind, etc., in hysterical patients, the physician contends with an enormous amount of unsatisfactory work.

There remains now only to explain the position of Phosphor and Sulphur in the Semiotik or Symptomatology.

Phosphor is used on the identical basis as Kali phos., and Sulphur (biochemically) stands in the middle between Kali mur. and Kali sulf.

PART II.

SEMIOTIK.

The term Semiotik has been selected by the author to indicate that the symptoms for selecting the cellular therapeutic remedies differ materially from the homœopathic drug symptomatology.

The cellular therapeutical symptom expresses the diagnostical, pathological and clinical indication, without any reference to homœopathic symptomatological provings.
